

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
9 FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
10

11 UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
12 Plaintiff-Respondent,
13 v.
14 LAWRENCE ROBINSON,
15 Defendant-Movant.
16

No. 1:97-cr-05129-NONE-3

ORDER DENYING MOTIONS UNDER 28 U.S.C. § 2255

(Doc. Nos. 405, 414)

17 Movant Lawrence Robinson has been serving a life sentence since 1999 for interfering 18 with commerce by robbery in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1951, carrying a firearm during a crime of 19 violence in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 924, and causing a death by use of a firearm during a crime 20 of violence, also in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 924. Approximately fourteen and thirteen years ago 21 respectively, movant brought his first and second motions challenging his life sentence under 28 22 U.S.C. § 2255, and both motions were denied. (See Doc. Nos. 351, 372.) He now brings, 23 through counsel, his third challenge by way of two § 2255 motions, asserting two different 24 claims for relief. (Doc. Nos. 405, 414.)

25 In his first claim, movant argues that he was wrongfully convicted of a “crime of 26 violence” because the federal statute defining “crime of violence” in this context is 27 unconstitutionally vague in light of the new substantive rule established by the U.S. Supreme 28 Court in Johnson v. United States, 576 U.S. 591 (2015) (“Johnson II”), and made retroactive by

1 the decision in Welch v. United States, ___U.S.____, 136 S. Ct. 1268 (2016). (Doc. No. 405, Attach.
2 1 at 1.) In his second claim, movant contends, based on the alleged discovery of new evidence 3 and another new substantive rule established by the Supreme Court in Lafler v. Cooper, 566 U.S.
4 156 (2012), and Missouri v. Frye, 566 U.S. 134 (2012), that his attorneys provided him 5 ineffective assistance in his criminal case by failing to communicate to him a formal plea offer, 6 which, if accepted, would have avoided the imposition of his mandatory life sentence. (Doc. No.
7 414 ¶¶ 4, 9.) Movant claims he would have accepted the plea offer had it been made known to 8 him by his attorneys and, as a result, he would not now be serving a life sentence. (Id. ¶ 21.)

9 The government has opposed both of movant's pending § 2255 motions, arguing that 10 Johnson II, Frye, and Lafler are inapplicable here, and thus movant is not entitled to relief with 11 respect to his convictions and sentences which remain valid. (Doc. Nos. 411, 416.) The 12 government also disputes the assertion that movant's attorneys did not communicate the 13 government's plea offer to him. (Doc. No. 416 at 8–10.) Movant has filed a reply. (Doc. Nos.
14 413, 419). Having considered the parties' submissions, the record in this case, and the applicable 15 law, the court concludes that the government's arguments are, by and large, well-taken.
16 Accordingly, and for the reasons explained below, the court will deny the pending § 2255 17 motions and decline to issue a certificate of appealability.

18 BACKGROUND

19 In 1997, by way of an initial indictment and two superseding indictments, movant was 20 charged with participating in a series of robberies, which included two counts of interfering with 21 commerce by robbery, two counts of carrying a firearm during a robbery, two counts of causing a 22 death during the commission of a robbery, one count of theft of a firearm during a residential 23 robbery, one count of carrying a firearm during a residential robbery, one count of attempting to 24 possess cocaine and cocaine base with intent to distribute, one count of carrying a firearm during 25 a drug trafficking crime, and one count of causing a death by using a firearm during a drug 26 trafficking crime. (Doc. Nos. 1, 47, 54, 411, & 416.) Prior to trial, the charge of carrying a 27 firearm during a residential robbery was dismissed by the court, and the three drug related 28 charges were dismissed on the motion of the government. (Doc. Nos. 411 at 2–3; 416 at 1–2.)

1 After a jury trial spanning late January and early February of 1999, movant was convicted on 2 count seven, for interference with commerce by robbery and aiding and abetting in violation of 18 3 U.S.C. § 1951(a); count eight, for carrying a firearm during a “crime of violence” in violation of 4 18 U.S.C. § 924(c)(1); and count nine, for death caused by use of a firearm during a “crime of 5 violence” in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 924(j)(1)-(2).<sup>1</sup> (Doc. No. 311 at 1.) Movant was sentenced 6 to life imprisonment on count nine for death caused by use of a firearm during a crime of 7 violence; 240 months of imprisonment on count seven for interference with commerce by 8 robbery, with that term to be served concurrently with the sentence imposed on count nine; and 9 60 months of imprisonment on count eight for carrying a firearm during a robbery, with that term
10 to be served consecutively to the sentences imposed as to counts seven and nine. (Id. at 1–2.)

11 LEGAL STANDARD

12 Title 28 U.S.C. § 2255 allows a federal prisoner to move “to vacate, set aside or correct 13 the sentence” on “the ground that the sentence was imposed in violation of the Constitution or 14 laws of the United States, or that the court was without jurisdiction to impose such sentence, or 15 that the sentence was in excess of the maximum authorized by law, or is otherwise subject to 16 collateral attack.” 28 U.S.C. § 2255. “In general, § 2255 provides the exclusive procedural 17 mechanism by which a federal prisoner may test the legality of detention.” Loretsen v. Hood, 18 223 F.3d 950, 953 (9th Cir. 2000).

19 This is movant’s third attempt to challenge his sentence under § 2255. The Antiterrorism 20 and Effective Death Penalty Act (“AEDPA”), which “codified the judicially established 21 principles of the abuse-of-the-writ doctrine,”<sup>2</sup> “greatly restrict[s] the power of federal courts to 22 /////

---

23 <sup>1</sup> Movant was also convicted on count 6, theft of a firearm during a residential robbery, but his 24 conviction on that count was reversed on direct appeal, resulting in his re-sentencing. (Doc. Nos.
25 158, 204, 206, 411 at 2–4.)

26 <sup>2</sup> “Before AEDPA was enacted in 1996, ‘a complex and evolving body of equitable principles 27 informed and controlled by historical usage, statutory developments, and judicial decisions’ 28 known as the abuse-of-the-writ doctrine guided federal courts in their consideration of second or successive habeas corpus petitions.” Jones v. Ryan, 733 F.3d 825, 841 (9th Cir. 2013) (citing McCleskey v. Zant, 499 U.S. 467, 489 (1991)).

1 award relief to [] prisoners who file second or successive habeas corpus applications.”<sup>3</sup> Jones v.
2 Ryan, 733 F.3d 825, 841–42 (9th Cir. 2013) (alteration in original) (quoting Tyler v. Cain, 533 3 U.S. 656, 661 (2001)). AEDPA thus generally limits a petitioner to “one motion under § 2255,” 4 and petitioner “may not bring a ‘second or successive motion’ unless [he] meets the exacting 5 standards of 28 U.S.C. § 2255(h).” United States v. Washington, 653 F.3d 1057, 1059 (9th Cir.
6 2011) (alteration in original) (emphasis added); see also Goodrum v. Busby, 824 F.3d 1188, 7 1191–92 (9th Cir. 2016) (“That classification matters because a petitioner raising new claims in a 8 second or successive petition must meet a more demanding standard to obtain relief than the 9 standard applicable to claims raised in a first petition.”). One of those exacting standards requires 10 that, “[b]efore the district court can entertain a second or successive § 2255 motion, the 11 appropriate court of appeals must certify the motion,” if “the applicant makes a prima facie 12 showing” as provided by 28 U.S.C. § 2244. Tate v. United States, 982 F.3d 1226, 1227 (9th Cir.
13 2020) (emphasis added). A “prima facie showing” simply means that the petitioner or applicant 14 has made “a sufficient showing of possible merit to warrant a fuller exploration by the district 15 court.” Henry v. Spearman, 899 F.3d 703, 705–06 (9th Cir. 2018) (citation omitted). If the 16 petitioner fails to first obtain the certification from the circuit court before filing a “second or 17 successive motion” in the district court, “the district court lacks jurisdiction to consider the 18 second or successive application.” United States v. Lopez, 577 F.3d 1053, 1061 (9th Cir. 2009).

19 Should the circuit court certify the filing of a “second or successive motion,” the district 20 court must then “conduct a thorough review of all allegations and evidence presented by the 21 prisoner to determine whether the motion meets [other] statutory requirements for the filing of a 22 second or successive motion.” United States v. Villa-Gonzalez, 208 F.3d 1160, 1165 (9th Cir.
23 2000) (alteration in original) (citing 28 U.S.C.A. § 2244(b)(4)); see also Villa-Gonzalez, 208 F.3d 24 at 1164 (holding that “that the plain language of section 2255 incorporates 28 U.S.C. § 2244(b)(4)

---

25
26 <sup>3</sup> “The phrase ‘second or successive application’ . . . is a ‘term of art,’ which ‘is not self-27 defining.’” Banister v. Davis, __U.S.__, 140 S. Ct. 1698, 1705 (2020). It does not simply refer 28 to a filing “made ‘second or successively in time,’ following an initial application.” Id. “A habeas petition is second or successive only if it raises claims that were or could have been adjudicated on the merits.” McNabb v. Yates, 576 F.3d 1028, 1029 (9th Cir. 2009).

1 as part of the certification procedures of section 2244.”). To establish that a second or successive 2 motion was properly filed, § 2255(h) also requires movant to show:

- 3 (1) newly discovered evidence that, if proven and viewed in light of 4 the evidence as a whole, would be sufficient to establish by clear 5 and convincing evidence that no reasonable factfinder would 6 have found the movant guilty of the offense; or
- 7 (2) a new rule of constitutional law, made retroactive to cases on 8 collateral review by the Supreme Court, that was previously 9 unavailable.

10 28 U.S.C. § 2255(h) (emphasis added). If the movant fails to make such showing, the “district 11 court shall dismiss any claim presented in a second or successive application that the court of 12 appeals has authorized.” § 2244(b)(4); see also Villa-Gonzalez, 208 F.3d at 1164.

13 ANALYSIS

14 Here, following the procedural requirements of AEDPA, movant properly sought 15 authorization from the Ninth Circuit to file a second or successive § 2255 motion by way of two 16 applications. (Doc. No. 414, ¶ 2.) The first application is based on a new substantive rule 17 purportedly articulated under Johnson II; the second is based on another new substantive rule 18 purportedly established in Lafler and Frye. (Doc. Nos. 405, Attach. 1 at 1; 414, ¶¶ 1–2, 4, 9, 22– 19 23.) In early 2017, the Ninth Circuit consolidated both of movant’s applications and authorized 20 him to file a second or successive motion in this court.<sup>4</sup> (Doc. No. 404 at 1.) The court thus has 21 jurisdiction to consider movant’s two new claims for relief under § 2255.

22 To reiterate, movant presents his two claims separately as two § 2255 motions in this 23 district court. (Doc. Nos. 405, Attach. 1; 414.) The first claim is premised on the theory that 18
24 U.S.C. § 924(c)(3), the criminal statute upon which movant’s convictions for carrying a firearm

---

25 <sup>4</sup> More precisely, the Ninth Circuit found that “[t]he application for authorization to file a second 26 or successive 28 U.S.C. § 2255 motion makes a prima facie showing for relief” under Johnson II 27 and Welch, but held that it “need not determine whether the application makes a prima facie 28 showing with respect to the remaining ineffective assistance of counsel claim.” (Doc. No. 404 at 1.) Even though the Ninth Circuit made a finding of prima facie showing only as to one of the two claims, district courts must “address, claim by claim, the entire application authorized” by the Ninth Circuit. Nevius v. McDaniel, 104 F.3d 1120, 1121 (9th Cir. 1996). In other words, this court must address both of movant’s claims here.

1 during a crime of violence and causing a death by use of a firearm during a crime of violence was 2 based, is unconstitutionally vague in defining “crime of violence”; the second claim, by contrast, 3 rests on the theory that movant’s attorneys failed to inform him of a formal plea offer made to 4 him by the government and did, therefore, provide movant ineffective assistance. (Doc. Nos.
5 405, Attach. 1; 414.) Given that movant has established a “prima facie showing” with respect to 6 his Johnson II claim before the Ninth Circuit, and his Lafler/Frye claim is permitted to follow 7 (Doc. No. 404), the issue now before this court is whether movant has met his burden of 8 satisfying either the requirements of subdivision (h)(1) or (h)(2) of § 2255.

9 Movant argues that § 2255(h)(2)<sup>5</sup> is satisfied here because his new claims are based on 10 “new rule[s] of constitutional law, made retroactive to cases on collateral review by the Supreme 11 Court, that [were] previously unavailable.”<sup>6</sup> 28 U.S.C. § 2255(h)(2); (Doc. Nos. 405, Attach. 1 at 12 1; 414 ¶ 4). The disposition of the pending § 2255 motions turn, therefore, on whether the two 13 claims satisfy § 2255(h)(2).

14 /////

15 /////

16 /////

---

17 <sup>5</sup> Movant does not argue that § 2255(h)(1) is applicable here. (Doc. Nos. 405, Attach. 1; 414 18 ¶ 4.) That is, movant does not argue that either his Johnson II claim (claim one) or his claim that 19 his counsel failed to advise him of a formal plea offer (claim two) could somehow be 20 characterized as a piece of evidence presented at trial that “would be sufficient to establish by clear and convincing evidence that no reasonable factfinder would have found the movant guilty of the offense.” 28 U.S.C. § 2255(h)(1); (see Doc. Nos. 414; 419).

21 <sup>6</sup> It is worth underscoring that “the Supreme Court is the only entity that can make a new rule 22 retroactive.” Tyler, 533 U.S. at 663 (original brackets omitted). “The new rule becomes 23 retroactive, not by the decisions of the lower court or by the combined action of the Supreme Court and the lower courts, but simply by the action of the Supreme Court.” Id. (emphasis 24 added). If a new rule of constitutional law is not given retroactive effect by the Supreme Court, the “errors of constitutional law could not be grounds for collateral relief.” Crater v. Galaza, 491 25 F.3d 1119, 1126 (9th Cir. 2007) (emphasis added). In the context of a second or successive § 2255 motion, the Ninth Circuit has made clear that it “is for the Supreme Court to decide” 26 whether new constitutional law has retroactive effect, and that an appellate court “may consider only whether the Supreme Court has yet done so, either explicitly or through two or more 27 holdings that in combination perform a logical proof.” Christian v. Thomas, 982 F.3d 1215, 1223 (9th Cir. 2020) (emphasis added). Thus, lower federal courts have no authority to make a new 28 constitutional rule retroactive.

1     A.     A “Crime of Violence” as Defined by § 924(c)(3)(A)’s Elements Clause Remains 2     Constitutionally Valid (1st Claim)

3     In his first claim, movant asserts that the characterization of his crimes of conviction as 4 crimes of violence under § 924(c)(3) is unconstitutional pursuant to Johnson II. Section 924(c)(3) 5 defines a “crime of violence” as an offense that is a felony and:

6             (A) has as an element the use, attempted use, or threatened use of 7 physical force against the person or property of another, or

8             (B) that by its nature, involves a substantial risk that physical force 9 against the person or property of another may be used in the course of committing the offense.

10    18 U.S.C. § 924(c)(3) (emphasis added). Subparagraph (A) is known as the elements clause, 11 while Subparagraph (B) is known as the residual clause. See United States v. Burke, 943 F.3d 12 1236, 1238 (9th Cir. 2019).

13    In this case, § 1951(a), also known as Hobbs Act robbery, is the predicate offense and, 14 according to the government, it is properly characterized as a crime of violence under § 924(c)(3).
15 That characterization permits the application of §§ 924(c)(1), and 924(j), for the use of a handgun 16 and commission of a murder, which only apply under the statute if the underlying criminal 17 conduct (Hobbs Act robbery) qualifies as a crime of violence. Specifically, movant was found to 18 have committed or threatened “physical violence to [a] person or property”<sup>7</sup> while he was 19 obstructing, delaying, or affecting “commerce or the movement of any article or commodity in 20 commerce” in violation of § 1951(a). 18 U.S.C. § 1951(a); (Doc. No. 311 at 1); see also United 21 States v. Dominguez, 954 F.3d 1251, 1255 (9th Cir. 2020) (“The definition of ‘crime of violence’ 22 in § 924(c)(3)(A) explicitly includes not just completed crimes, but those felonies that have the 23 ‘attempted use’ of physical force as an element.”). He was also found guilty of violating 24 § 924(c)(1) by using or carrying a firearm during and in relation to a “crime of violence.”
25 § 924(c)(1); (Doc. No. 311 at 1). Finally, he was found guilty of committing a murder or 26    <sup>7</sup> See Stokeling v. United States, __U.S.__, 139 S. Ct. 544, 553 (2019) (distinguishing between 27 “physical force” and “violent force,” where former is “the ‘unwanted’ nature of the physical 28 contact,” but the latter—“violent force”—“suggests a degree of power that would not be satisfied by the merest touching.”)

1 manslaughter in the course of carrying out a “crime of violence” in violation of § 924(j). See 18 2 U.S.C. § 924(j)(1)-(2); (Doc. No. 311 at 1).

3 Here, defendant Robinson relies on the Supreme Court’s decision in Johnson II to argue 4 that the term “crime of violence” as defined by § 924(c)(3) is unconstitutionally vague. (Doc. No.
5 405, Attach. 1 at 4–13.) However, Johnson II does not stand for the proposition that the entirety 6 of § 924(c)(3) is unconstitutional, nor is there any Ninth Circuit or Supreme Court authority that 7 so holds. Rather, the Supreme Court in Johnson II held only that the residual clause of the Armed 8 Career Criminal Act (“ACCA”), 18 U.S.C. § 924(e)(2)(B)(ii), was “unconstitutionally vague”<sup>8</sup>— 9 an unrelated criminal statute of which was not implicated by movant’s counts of conviction in this 10 case. See Johnson II, 135 S. Ct. at 2557. Critically, Johnson II does not address the 11 constitutionality of the elements clause of § 924(e)(2)(B), which has identical language to 12 § 924(c)(3)(A). See Johnson II, 135 S. Ct. 2551. Compare 18 U.S.C. § 924(e)(2)(B)(i) (defining 13 a “crime of violence” alternatively as having “as an element the use, attempted use, or threatened 14 use of physical force against the person of another”) with § 924(c)(3)(A) (defining a “crime of 15 violence” also as having “as an element the use, attempted use, or threatened use of physical force 16 against the person or property of another”). Movant cites no relevant, controlling authorities that 17 have construed the decision in Johnson II so broadly as to invalidate either § 924(e)(2)(B)’s or 18 § 924(c)(3)(A)’s elements clause. (See Doc. No. 405, Attach. 1 at 2–13). Indeed, many courts 19 have come to exactly the opposite conclusion to that urged by movant here. See, e.g., 20 Grzegorzcyk v. United States v. Watson, 997 F.3d 743, 746 (7th Cir. 2021) (“Following Davis, a 21 § 924(c) conviction based on a crime of violence may rely only on the statute’s [§ 924(c)(3)(A)] 22 “elements clause.”); United States v. Hammond, 996 F.3d 374, 397-98 (7th Cir. 2021) (“[T]his 23

---

24 <sup>8</sup> The Supreme Court has held that the residual clause of “§ 924(c)(3)(B) is unconstitutionally 25 vague.” United States v. Davis, __U.S.__, 139 S. Ct. 2319 (2019). The Ninth Circuit, however, 26 has made the limited reach of Davis clear in holding that Davis “is of no consequence” to whether 27 § 924(c)(3)(A)’s elements clause is unconstitutional. Burke, 943 F.3d at 1238; accord In re Hall, 28 979 F.3d 339, 343 (5th Cir. 2020) (“Davis left intact the elements clause of § 924(c), and the crime of kidnapping resulting in death falls within the elements clause.”); United States v.
Nikolla, 950 F.3d 51, 54 n.4 (2d Cir. 2020), cert. denied, __U.S.__, 141 S. Ct. 634 (2020) (observing that Davis does not impact § 924(c)(3)(A)’s definition of a “crime of violence.”).

1 Court and our sister courts have consistently held that Davis’s invalidation of the residual clause 2 of § 924(c) did not affect the continued constitutionality of the elements clause.”) (citing cases);
3 United States v. Ellis, No. 13-cr-00818-PJH-1, 2020 WL 5910072, at *8 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 6, 2020)
4 (“In Davis, the Supreme Court held that the residual clause of 18 U.S.C. § 924(c)(3)(B) is 5 unconstitutionally vague, leaving the elements clause intact.”); United States v. Mariscal, No.
6 1:11-cr-00304-LJO, 2018 WL 1911350, at *5 (E.D. Cal. Apr. 23, 2018) (holding that Johnson II
7 does not invalidate § 924(c)(3)(A)’s elements clause); United States v. Sehorn, No. 16-cv-1573 8 WQH, 2017 WL 1336872, at *6 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 17, 2017) (holding that despite Johnson II, 9 “violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1951(a) remains a crime of violence under § 924(c)”); see also 10 Stokeling, 139 S. Ct. at 555 (holding that Florida robbery statute “qualifies as an ACCA-predicate 11 offense under the elements clause,” implying the continued validity of that elements clause, post-12 Johnson II). Accordingly, movant has failed to establish that Johnson II provides a legal basis 13 under § 2255(h)(2) for the relief he is seeking by way of the pending motion.

14 It would appear that what movant is seeking here is not an application of Johnson II, but 15 an extension of that holding in order to invalidate § 924(c)(3)(A)’s elements clause and to have 16 that extension made retroactive so as to trigger and obtain relief under § 2255(h)(2). See United 17 States v. Garcia-Cruz, No. 16CV1508-MMA, 2017 WL 3269231, at *4 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 1, 2017)
18 (“In sum, Defendant’s claim arises out of an extension, not an application, of the rule announced 19 in” Johnson II); Hirano v. United States, No. CR 99-00465 ACK, 2017 WL 2661629, at *7 (D.
20 Haw. June 20, 2017) (“[T]he Court is not persuaded by Petitioner’s argument that his claim 21 requires only a simple application, rather than an extension” of Johnson II); see also supra note 6 22 (explaining that only the Supreme Court can declare a new rule of constitutional law retroactively 23 applicable). The argument that this court should both extend the holding in Johnson II and make 24 that extension retroactively applicable does not provide a basis for collateral review under 25 § 2255(h)(2). See 28 U.S.C. § 2255(h)(2) (“a new rule of constitutional law[] made retroactive to 26 cases on collateral review by the Supreme Court”); see also Tyler, 533 U.S. at 663 (“The Supreme 27 Court does not ‘ma[k]e’ a rule retroactive when it merely establishes principles of retroactivity 28 and leaves the application of those principles to lower courts.”).

1 Most significantly, the Ninth Circuit has consistently affirmed the constitutionality of 2 § 924(c)(3)(A)’s elements clause by upholding the validity of numerous predicate offenses, 3 including Hobbs Act robbery, as a “crime of violence.”<sup>9</sup> Dominguez, 954 F.3d 1251, 1260 (9th 4 Cir. 2020) (holding that “Hobbs Act robbery is a crime of violence under the elements clause” of 5 § 924(c)(3)(A));<sup>10</sup> Burke, 943 F.3d at 1239 (“There is simply no room to find robbery involving 6 controlled substances under § 2118(a) is anything but a crime of violence under § 924(c)(3)(A)’s 7 elements clause,” thereby reaffirming the validity of the elements clause); United States v.
8 Gobert, 943 F.3d 878, 882 (9th Cir. 2019) (“There is simply no room to find assault with a 9 dangerous weapon under § 113(a)(3) anything but a crime of violence under § 924(c)(3)(A)’s 10 elements clause . . . .”); United States v. Watson, 881 F.3d 782, 786 (9th Cir.) (affirming that 11 “armed bank robbery under § 2113(a) and (d) qualifies as a crime of violence” under 12 § 924(c)(3)(A)’s elements clause), cert. denied, ___U.S.___, 139 S. Ct. 203 (2018); United States v.
13 Gutierrez, 876 F.3d 1254, 1257 (9th Cir. 2017) (following other circuits in concluding that “the 14 federal offense of carjacking [under § 2119] is categorically a crime of violence under § 924(c),” 15 even after Johnson II); see also United States v. McHaney, ___F.4th___, 2021 WL 2410685, at *2 16 (7th Cir. June 14, 2021) (“[W]e have held time and again that Hobbs Act robbery qualifies as a 17 crime of violence under the elements clause—(§ 924(c)(3)(A))—because it entails the use or 18 threat of force” and noting that every court of appeals to have considered the issue, including the 19 Ninth Circuit, has agreed with that conclusion.). These binding Ninth Circuit decisions uniformly 20 counsel against concluding that § 924(c)(3)(A)’s elements clause is unconstitutionally vague 21 under the decision in Johnson II. Movant’s first claim for relief, therefore, must be denied given

---

22 <sup>9</sup> (See Doc. No. 405, Attach. 1 at 2–14) (movant arguing at length that a Hobbs Act robbery is 23 not a “crime of violence” under § 924(c)(3)).

24 <sup>10</sup> Every circuit confronted with the same question has also held that a Hobbs Act robbery is 25 validly a “crime of violence” under § 924(c)(3)(A)’s elements clause. See United States v.
26 Mathis, 932 F.3d 242, 266 (4th Cir. 2019); United States v. Jones, 919 F.3d 1064, 1072 (8th Cir.
27 2019); United States v. Garcia-Ortiz, 904 F.3d 102, 106–09 (1st Cir. 2018); United States v.
28 Melgar-Cabrera, 892 F.3d 1053, 1060–66 (10th Cir. 2018); United States v. Hill, 890 F.3d 51, 60
(2d Cir. 2018); United States v. Fox, 878 F.3d 574, 579 (7th Cir. 2017); United States v. Gooch, 850 F.3d 285, 292 (6th Cir. 2017); United States v. Buck, 847 F.3d 267, 275 (5th Cir. 2017); In re
St. Fleur, 824 F.3d 1337, 1340–41 (11th Cir. 2016).

1 that § 2255(h)(2) has not been satisfied as to that claim.

2 B. Relief on Petitioner’s Second Claim Must Be Denied Because Neither Frye Nor 3 Lafler* Is a New Rule of Constitutional Law as Required by § 2255(h)(2)

4 In Lafler and Frye, the Supreme Court “extended the Sixth Amendment right to effective 5 assistance of counsel to plea negotiations” and set forth the standards for applying Strickland<sup>11</sup> in 6 the plea-bargaining context. Clark v. Chappell, 936 F.3d 944, 968 (9th Cir. 2019) (citing Frye, 7 566 U.S. at 140; Lafler, 566 U.S. at 162). Thus it has now been recognized that, as a general rule, 8 “defense counsel has the duty to communicate formal offers from the prosecution to accept a plea 9 on terms and conditions that may be favorable to the accused.” Frye, 566 U.S. at 145.

10 Movant’s second claim is premised on the allegation that he recently discovered that the 11 government made a plea offer to him through his counsel in April 1998, but his then-counsel 12 breached the duty to communicate that offer to him. (Doc. No. 414 ¶¶ 4, 9, 20–21.) Movant 13 states that after he learned of the Supreme Court’s decision in Frye, he “wondered whether any 14 plea agreement had been conveyed to him” because he was never informed of any. (Id. ¶¶ 17, 15 21.) After unsuccessful attempts to obtain his case file from the government and from the Federal 16 Defender’s office, movant contacted his co-defendant, James Richardson, for Richardson’s legal 17 file and he received, in January 2016, a file which contained a copy of the plea offer letter from 18 the government. (Id. ¶¶ 17–21) (citing Doc. No. 414-1, Attach. 1 at 30–31). That letter offered to 19 dismiss several counts of the indictment against movant, including count nine (in which he was 20 charged with a death caused by use of a firearm during a “crime of violence”) upon which he was 21 convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment, in exchange for his plea of guilty to being a career 22 offender and to robbery of an inhabited dwelling. (See Doc. No. 414-1, Attach. 1 at 30–31.)<sup>12</sup>

23 /////

24 _____
25 <sup>11</sup> Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668 (1984).

26 <sup>12</sup> Although this claim is premised upon newly discovered evidence, it is not the type of new 27 evidence that would trigger operation of 28 U.S.C. § 2255(1), which applies to “newly discovered 28 evidence that, if proven and viewed in light of the evidence as a whole, would be sufficient to establish by clear and convincing evidence that no reasonable factfinder would have found the movant guilty of the offense.” Movant does not suggest otherwise.

1 Two decades after the plea offer was allegedly made but not conveyed to movant, he now 2 seeks relief from his life sentence under the holdings in Lafler and Frye, arguing that those 3 decisions announced “a new rule of constitutional law, made retroactive to cases on collateral 4 review by the Supreme Court, previously unavailable.” 28 U.S.C. § 2255(h)(2); (Doc. Nos. 414
5 ¶¶ 4, 9; 419 at 3).<sup>13</sup> However, the mere announcement of “a new constitutional rule of criminal 6 procedure” by the Supreme Court does not, as a general matter, apply retroactively “to 7 convictions that were final when the new rule was announced.” Montgomery v. Louisiana, 577 8 U.S. 190, 198 (2016); see also Tyler, 533 U.S. at 663 (“The Supreme Court does not ‘ma[k]e’ a 9 rule retroactive when it merely establishes principles of retroactivity and leaves the application of 10 those principles to lower courts.”). Whether a new constitutional rule of criminal procedure 11 merits retroactive application turns on a careful balancing by the Supreme Court<sup>14</sup> between, “first, 12 the need for finality in criminal cases, and second, the countervailing imperative to ensure that 13 criminal punishment is imposed only when authorized by law.” Welch, 136 S. Ct. at 1266.

14 The government opposes movant’s claim, arguing that neither Lafler nor Frye is a new 15 constitutional law, and that neither has been made retroactively applicable by the Supreme Court.
16 (Doc. No. 416 at 7–8.) The government’s argument is compelling in light of the Ninth Circuit’s 17 decision in Buenrostro v. United States, 697 F.3d 1137 (9th Cir. 2012) (“Buenrostro I”) which is 18 binding on this court.

19 In Buenrostro I, the Ninth Circuit held that “neither Frye nor Lafler can form the basis for 20 an application for a second or successive motion because neither case decided a new rule of 21 constitutional law,” reasoning that “[t]he Supreme Court in both cases merely applied the Sixth 22 Amendment right to effective assistance of counsel according to the test articulated” in 23 Strickland, and “established in the plea-bargaining context” in Hill v. Lockhart, 474 U.S. 52 24 (1985). Buenrostro I, 697 F.3d at 1140; accord Pagan-San Miguel v. United States, 736 F.3d 44, 25 45 (1st Cir. 2013) (“We agree with every other circuit to have considered the issue that neither

---

26 <sup>13</sup> Movant cites no specific Supreme Court case holding that either Frye or Lafler is applicable
27 retroactively. (See Doc. Nos. 414; 419.)

28 <sup>14</sup> See supra note 6.

1 Frye nor Cooper established a ‘new rule of constitutional law.’”); Hare v. United States, 688 F.3d
2 878, 881 (7th Cir. 2012) (same); In re Liddell, 722 F.3d 737, 738–39 (6th Cir. 2013) (same); In re
3 Graham, 714 F.3d 1181, 1182 (10th Cir. 2013) (same); Gallagher v. United States, 711 F.3d 315, 4 315–16 (2d Cir. 2013) (same as to Frye and Lafler); Williams v. United States, 705 F.3d 293, 294
5 (8th Cir. 2013) (same as to Frye and Cooper); In re Perez, 682 F.3d 930, 932 (11th Cir. 2012) 6 (same as to Frye and Lafler). Consequently, in Buenrostro I the Ninth Circuit affirmed the 7 district court’s denial of a second or successive § 2255 motion which was based on the decisions 8 in Frye and Lafler, for failure to satisfy § 2255(h)(2). Buenrostro I, 697 F.3d at 1140–41.
9 Notwithstanding the foregoing, movant advances the argument that the Ninth Circuit’s conclusion 10 in Buenrostro I—and, by implication, every circuit that has considered this issue—is “incorrect” 11 and urges this court to disregard that binding authority. (Doc. No. 419 at 6–7) (asserting that 12 “[t]he Ninth Circuit’s analysis is incorrect” and “that fundamental fairness requires the retroactive 13 application of Frye and Lafler.”).<sup>15</sup>

14 “The law of precedent teaches that like cases should generally be treated alike,” Epic Sys.
15 Corp. v. Lewis, __U.S.__, 138 S. Ct. 1612 (2018), and “if a controlling precedent is determined to 16 be on point, it must be followed,” Hart v. Massanari, 266 F.3d 1155, 1172–73 (9th Cir. 2001).
17 “The district court does not have the authority to ignore circuit court precedent, and neither do 18 we.” Mohamed v. Uber Techs., Inc., 848 F.3d 1201, 1211 (9th Cir. 2016); see also In re United 19 States, 945 F.3d 616, 627 (2d Cir. 2019) (Judges “cloaked with the authority granted by Article
20 III of the Constitution, are not at liberty to impose their personal view of a just result in the face 21 of a contrary rule of law.”). “Stare decisis ‘promotes the evenhanded, predictable, and consistent 22 development of legal principles, fosters reliance on judicial decisions, and contributes to the 23 actual and perceived integrity of the judicial process.’” Gamble v. United States, 139 S. Ct. 1960,

---

24
25 <sup>15</sup> The Ninth Circuit has, on multiple occasions, acknowledged that Buenrostro I is controlling.
26 See United States v. Buenrostro, 895 F.3d 1160, 1163 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, __U.S.__, 139 S.
27 Ct. 438 (2018) (“Buenrostro II”); Holmes v. Johnson, 617 F. App’x 758, 762 (9th Cir. 2015) (“In 28 holding that Frye and Lafler did not break new ground, we concur with the reasoning of another Ninth Circuit panel employed in the context of a second or successive motion”); Baker v. Ryan, 497 F. App’x 771, 773 (9th Cir. 2012) (“But Lafler and Frye do not recognize new constitutional rights.”).

1 1969 (2019). Here, movant asks the court to ignore not only Buenrostro I but also a longstanding 2 history of similar precedent. This the court cannot do. Because of that, relief must also be denied 3 as to movant’s second claim due to movant’s failure to satisfy § 2255(h)(2).

4 C. A Certificate of Appealability is Not Appropriate

5 The court now turns to whether a certificate of appealability should be issued. See 28 6 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(1)(B). An issuance of a COA “must not be pro forma or a matter of course,” 7 Miller-El v. Cockrell, 537 U.S. 322, 337 (2003), nor is it “coextensive with a merits analysis,” 8 Buck v. Davis, 137 S. Ct. 759, 773 (2017). Under § 2253(c) of AEDPA, “a COA may not [be] 9 issue[d] unless ‘the applicant has made a substantial showing of the denial of a constitutional 10 right.’” Slack v. McDaniel, 529 U.S. 473, 483 (2000) (alteration in original) (quoting 28 U.S.C.
11 § 2253(c)). To satisfy this standard, the movant must show that “jurists of reason could disagree 12 with the district court’s resolution of his constitutional claims or that jurists could conclude the 13 issues presented are adequate to deserve encouragement to proceed further.” Miller-El, 537 U.S.
14 at 327. The movant must prove “‘something more than the absence of frivolity’ or the existence 15 of mere ‘good faith’ on his or her part.” Id. at 338. “The COA determination under § 2253(c) 16 requires an overview of the claims in the habeas petition and a general assessment of their 17 merits,” id. at 336, but without a “full consideration of the factual or legal bases adduced in 18 support of the claims,” Buck, 137 S. Ct. at 773. The district court must “indicate which specific 19 issue or issues satisfy the standard for issuing a certificate, or state its reasons why a certificate 20 should not be granted.” United States v. Asrar, 116 F.3d 1268, 1270 (9th Cir. 1997).

21 Here, movant has also failed to make “a substantial showing” that his constitutional rights 22 were denied as required by § 2253(c). Miller-El, 537 U.S. at 327. As to the first claim, the Ninth 23 Circuit has repeatedly upheld the district courts’ conclusions that § 924(c)(3)(A)’s elements 24 clause remains a valid basis for a conviction. See Gray v. United States, 830 F. App’x 210 (9th 25 Cir. 2020) (affirming the denial of a § 2255 motion because “Gray’s § 924(c) convictions remain 26 valid.”); United States v. Allen, 828 F. App’x 428 (9th Cir. 2020) (“Contrary to Allen’s 27 contention, Hobbs Act robbery qualifies as a crime of violence under the elements clause in 28 § 924(c)(3)(A).”); United States v. Sleugh, 827 F. App’x 645, 649 (9th Cir. 2020) (same); United

1 States v. Martin, 822 F. App'x 521, 526 (9th Cir. 2020) (same); United States v. Milsten, 814 F.
2 App'x 244, 247 (9th Cir. 2020) (same). And as to the second claim, the Ninth Circuit has 3 likewise affirmed a district court's denial of relief under AEDPA because neither Frye nor Lafler
4 announced a new rule of constitutional law, much less one with retroactive effect so as to trigger 5 § 2255(h)(2). See Baker v. Ryan, 497 F. App'x 771, 773 (9th Cir. 2012) (affirming the denial of 6 federal habeas corpus petition because "Lafler and Frye do not recognize new constitutional 7 rights."); see also Londo v. United States, No. 3:05-cr-00085-LRH-WGC, 2013 WL 12304290, at 8 *2 (D. Nev. Sept. 25, 2013) (denying a § 2255 motion because "Frye did not create a new 9 constitutional right to be applied retroactively to cases on collateral review."); Hodge v.
10 Swarthout, No. CV 12-8436-DOC CW, 2013 WL 4789737, at *6 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 4, 2013) 11 (adopting the findings and recommendations recommending the denial of relief because "neither 12 [Lafler nor Frye] decided a new rule of constitutional law."); United States v. Sua, No. CR 98-13 00411HG-02, 2013 WL 3872791, at *3 (D. Haw. July 24, 2013) (denying a § 2255 motion 14 because "Frye, Lafler and Martinez did not create new rules of constitutional law or recognize a 15 new right that applies here."). In accordance with the foregoing authorities, the court is not 16 persuaded that "jurists of reason could disagree with the district court's resolution of his 17 constitutional claims or that jurists could conclude the issues presented are adequate to deserve 18 encouragement to proceed further." Miller-El, 537 U.S. at 327. It follows that § 2253(c) has not 19 been satisfied and a certificate of appealability should not be issued.

20 CONCLUSION

21 For the reasons set forth above, movant's § 2255 motions (Doc. Nos. 405 & 414), are 22 DENIED, and the court declines to issue a certificate of appealability. The Clerk of Court is 23 further directed to assign a district judge to this matter for the purposes of closure and to re-close 24 this case.

25 IT IS SO ORDERED.

26 Dated: June 29, 2021

27
UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE